

Being an Apprentice at EduSource

Who we are:

-  Privately owned company started by Taylor University alumni
-  Believe in equipping the future
-  Strong commitment to education, community, and leadership
-  Expectation of excellence in software development

What you'll gain by being an EduSource Apprentice:

Money! Apprentice pay starts at $14 per hour (Level 1) and goes up to $17 per hour for leadership positions.

Experience. Recent graduates often have a hard time finding that first job -- employers want five years of experience. As an apprentice, you'll get the first two years under your belt. We'll be thrilled to write you a great recommendation.

A possible future job. At this point, we've offered full-time jobs to 75% of our graduating apprentices. A full-time job at EduSource offers many additional benefits.

Professional Opportunities. At the end of each summer, we take our senior apprentices to a professional programming conference that is located on the beach in Florida. Students have the chance to network with technology professionals and learn from industry leaders.

Real-World Preparation. Students learn industry best practices through everyday work on programming projects under experienced software developers.

Exposure. Our apprentices occasionally get exposure to client relationships by attending meetings and phone calls with clients and sometimes even delivering professional presentations.

What apprenticeship looks like:

Students will start at EduSource in early summer. Housing will be up to the individuals.

The first week will include several training days, during which you'll meet the whole EduSource team, learn about the software development life cycle, and be trained on working as an employee at EduSource. There will be some fun thrown in there, too.

You'll be placed on a development team, under the leadership of a SE IV and with a few SE IIs or SE IIIs. Your team will be dedicated to completing a specific project.

During the summer, you'll work in our offices, with your team 40 hours per week. There will be several leadership and training opportunities scheduled right into our days.

You'll also be invited to weekly game nights and other culture events. Our full-time employees are excited to invest in you!

When summer ends, we'll work with you to schedule EduSource into your school schedule. We'll connect with you weekly to answer questions, etc. You'll work at least 15 hours per week in any place with good wi-fi.

edusource
humanizing technology